

FACT SHEET: Protecting Individuals from Discrimination Based on Actual or Perceived Shared Ancestry or Ethnic Characteristics

The U.S. Department of Transportation and its operating administrations enforce Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and its implementing regulations (collectively Title VI),* which prohibits discrimination based on race, color, and national origin (including limited English proficiency) in any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance. This fact sheet describes the ways in which Title VI protects individuals who are or are perceived to be Jewish, Christian, Muslim, Sikh, Hindu, Buddhist, or of another religious group. This fact sheet also provides examples that may raise Title VI concerns relevant to programs or activities receiving DOT funds.

What is required under Title VI?

1. Title VI's protection from race, color, and national origin (including limited English proficiency) discrimination extends to individuals who experience discrimination, including harassment, based on their actual or perceived: (i) shared ancestry or ethnic characteristics; or (ii) citizenship or residency in a country with a dominant religion or distinct religious identity.
2. Title VI prohibits discrimination based on race, color, and national origin against individuals of any religion, such as individuals who are Jewish, Christian, Muslim, Sikh, Hindu, or Buddhist. For example, this includes discrimination involving:
 - racial, ethnic, or ancestral slurs or stereotypes
 - how an individual looks, including skin color, physical features, or style of dress that reflects both ethnic and religious traditions
 - an accent or a name, including names commonly associated with a particular shared ancestry or ethnic characteristic, or speaking a non-English language
3. In addition to Title VI, Federal law (49 U.S.C. § 40127) prohibits airlines from discriminating against passengers based on other protected categories, including religion. If an airline has discriminated against a passenger based only on religion, this law may apply. Because Title VI does not protect individuals from discrimination based on religion, DOT may refer discrimination complaints based solely on religion to the U.S. Department of Justice, which may have jurisdiction.

* 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq. and DOT's implementing regulations at 49 C.F.R. Part 21.

Examples that may, depending upon individual facts and circumstances, raise Title VI concerns:

- A State Department of Motor Vehicles requires everyone to remove head coverings when renewing their driver’s license photograph and refuses to make an exception for a practicing Sikh individual who wears head coverings in public for religious purposes.
- A Jewish man reports to his local transit agency that a bus driver on his regular commute often mocks his appearance, including his sidelocks and kippah. The transit agency refuses to address his complaint, telling him that the driver is just joking around.
- Airport lounge customers complain to staff that a group of Pakistani customers are making other people uncomfortable because they are speaking in Arabic and using the word “Allah.” The airport lounge staff call airport security, who escort the customers out of the lounge.

How can you report discrimination under Title VI?

Anyone who believes they have been discriminated against based on race, color, or national origin, may file a complaint of discrimination with the Department or its operating administrations. A list of the operating administrations is below. To learn more about the compliant resolution process, visit DOT’s website:
