I'm unsure why they are removing some of the testing requirements from the network device and video (CCTV) sections. They are also deleting the requirement for the Contractor to "Develop and submit a field acceptance test (FAT) plan to the Engineer for review and approval." I know that they have been working on standardized test plans, so my only thought is that these test plans will be in place prior to the July Standard Specs being released. If that is the case then a Contractor submittal of the test plan would not be required and the testing items they deleted may be included in the standardized test plans.
